OPERA

Description

Raiffeisen is a cooperative bank. And that makes all the difference.

You can become a member and enjoy the numerous OPERA advantages.

As a Raiffeisen member, you are rewarded for your trust in us through preferential pricing terms, OPERA points to collect, and services and products tailored to your needs.

Collect OPERA points by entrusting Raiffeisen with your savings or the financing of your projects. Then use the points to pay your fees related to the provision of a credit and debit card, contribute to your children's or grandchildren's savings, or even to make a donation to a charity.

Place your savings in a sight deposit or term deposit account or in the R-TOP savings account and obtain OPERA points proportional to the amounts saved.

You can also receive OPERA points by taking out a car loan, a housing loan for your family, a loan to furnish your home or to finance the third level education of your children.

And, the more you work with the Bank, the more points you earn.

GLOSSARY

Online banking	The account provider makes an online access to the account available to the customer.
Arranged overdraft	The account provider and the customer agree in advance that the customer may borrow money when there is no money left in the account. The agreement determines a maximum amount that can be borrowed, and whether fees and interest will be charged to the customer.
Direct debit	The customer permits someone else (recipient) to instruct the account provider to transfer money from the customer's account to that recipient. The account provider then transfers money to the recipient on a date or dates agreed by the customer and the recipient. The amount may vary.
Account statement	The account provider makes an account statement available to the customer.
Providing a credit card	The account provider provides a payment card linked to the customer's payment account. The total amount of the transactions made using the card during an agreed period is taken either in full or in part from the customer's payment account on an agreed date. A credit agreement between the provider and the customer determines whether interest will be charged to the customer for the borrowing.
Providing a debit card	The account provider provides a payment card linked to the customer's account. The amount of each transaction made using the card is taken directly and in full from the customer's account.
Standing order	The account provider makes regular transfers, on the instruction of the customer, of a fixed amount of money from the customer's account to another account.
Cash withdrawal	The customer takes cash out of the customer's account.
Maintaining the account	The account provider operates the account for use by the customer.
Credit transfer	The account provider transfers money, on the instruction of the customer, from the customer's account to another account.

GENERAL REMARKS

These fees concern the most common banking transactions but are not an exhaustive and detailed list of all our fees and conditions. Please feel free to contact us directly if you would like additional information. Fees indicated may be changed at any time without prior notice.

Fees and non-monetary benefits received or paid

1. General

As an integral part of the obligations incumbent on the bank to inform customers of the non-monetary fees and benefits received or paid, this document is intended to identify, with regard to the investment services and activities and ancillary services provided by the bank, the circumstances that give rise or are likely to give rise to such fees or non-monetary benefits.

Pursuant to Article 24 of the general terms and conditions, in the event of the transmission of an order to another professional on behalf of the customer or the provision of another investment service or ancillary service to the customer, the bank may require remuneration through retrocession of that professional party's fee or the remuneration or benefit paid to a third party and may be required to pay or provide a remuneration or a benefit to a third party. If the bank receives commission payments as part of the R-Gestion investment service, these will be paid to the customer.

It should be stressed that investment advice and recommendations are not influenced by the benefits paid or received, as the bank always acts in the best interests of its customers. The bank shall take all appropriate measures to detect and avoid or manage possible situations in which conflicts of interest may arise between the interests of a customer and those of the bank (including its officers, employees, tied agents and persons directly or indirectly linked to the bank through a control relationship) or those of another customer in the provision of an investment service and any ancillary service or combination thereof, including those arising from the receipt of inducements from third parties or from the remuneration structure and other incentive structures specific to the banking institution.

From this perspective, the negotiation of commissions received is carried out by persons other than account managers, all in accordance with the bank's conflict of interest policy. Remuneration, fees or non-monetary benefits paid or received by the bank in connection with an investment service are deemed to improve the quality of the service provided to the customer, in particular by increasing access to a wider range of products.

2. Fees received - Fees for distributing UCIs and structured products

2.1. Execution only

The bank offers its customers a wide range of investment products, including units in collective investment undertakings (UCI) promoted by the bank, UCIs and structured products or other products of third parties, to which customers may subscribe on their own initiative, as the bank does not give any recommendation or advice in this respect.

In return for providing these products to customers, providing information and updating this information (prospectus, history, yield and other useful information), the UCI, the issuer of structured products or other products or its representatives may remunerate the bank by commission calculated in particular on the basis of a management commission or other commissions levied in the context of these products. The fee received may vary depending on the asset classes of the investments made or the outstandings generated⁴, the net asset value (NAV), its frequency, the rates negotiated under the terms of the distribution agreements, the number of shares in circulation or other factors.

2.2. Consulting and Management

The bank may benefit from the same commission (point 2.1.) when it provides investment advice (remunerated or not) or issues a general recommendation under the same conditions. Similarly, the managing bank (or its management company) may receive from UCIs, issuers of structured products or other products or from their representatives, when their financial instruments are placed in the portfolios of customers, a fee based on the aforementioned criteria which it will subsequently pay back to the customer.

This fee is intended to maintain independent third party fund and product selection in order to best meet the customer's needs. This management approach aims to optimise investor satisfaction and contribute to maximising the return/risk ratio of their investments by diversifying asset classes, geographic areas, market segments and management styles.

The expertise and know-how of external managers ultimately benefit the customer and the quality of the service provided is enhanced. This means the Bank is required to look for management experience, examine the fund universe and other products and analyse the management process. This policy is based on objective quantitative and qualitative criteria such as:

- performance, recurring performance, management style
- the ability to manage risk
- the ability to "outperform" the market
- rigorous adherence to the management style

which require a dedicated infrastructure and considerable monitoring (where necessary analysis of the investment strategy, due diligence, meetings and proximity with UCI and structured product managers and others, presentation to an Investment Committee, on-site visits and monitoring of their performance, investment strategy, and the portfolio's compliance with the management style). The recurrent fees are warranted by this permanent monitoring process.

3. Non-monetary services received

The bank may receive from its intermediaries, for example, financial analyses that it may use among other elements to determine its investment strategy as well as to enhance the investment advice provided. These intermediaries are selected on the basis of objective criteria, both qualitative and quantitative, and do not take into account the non-monetary services received. The procedure for selecting intermediaries is also consistent with the policy for managing conflicts of interest.

4. Fees paid to third parties

The bank may remunerate certain third parties, for example in order to expand its customer fund or as part of a service provider relationship. These third parties do not generally offer custody services which only a credit institution is authorised to provide or do not offer investment services.

These third parties fulfil a selection role vis-à-vis the customer by seeking for the customer the financial institution that will be able to offer the service that best meets their expectations and needs. They propose customers that are part of the bank's target segmentation. The bank has established internal procedures for both the selection of these third parties and its organisation in order to develop long-term relationships and preserve their stability.

The remuneration of these intermediaries may consist in paying them a commission calculated either on the basis of a portion of the commissions received or receivable on the transactions performed or to be performed by the customer, or an amount based on the assets in deposit, or an amount proportional to the customer's entry fees in certain UCIs. This amount can be spread out to preserve the stability of the relationship over time.

The customer may obtain further details on how these benefits are determined by request from their usual manager.

¹ The usual average rate of the benefit received on fees earned, all tranches and all financial instruments combined, does not exceed 1%.
